

Which is more beneficial – Critical Illness or Medical Insurance?

Does Medical Insurance really offer employees the peace of mind and security they need?

With advancements in medicine, we now live in a world where suffering a critical illness such as a heart attack, stroke or being diagnosed with cancer, whilst being a life changing event, it may not necessarily be a life-ending one.

With survival rates improving we are now posed with the real risk when it comes to financial planning – how will I cope if I survive a critical illness?

More than 40,000
people are diagnosed with cancer in the Middle East per year ¹

50% of people
now survive a form of cancer for at least 10 years
following diagnosis
representing an improvement of 26%
over the last 40 years ²

Around the world,
there are 12.2
million
new strokes per year ³

Over 50%
of UAE residents
are affected by heart disease ⁴

Whilst survival rates are now more encouraging, unfortunately a full return to a pre-event quality of life cannot be guaranteed. There may be residual effects caused by the event, requiring extended leave of absence or convalescence, or indeed more significant lifestyle changes required due to temporary or permanent disability.

Medical Insurance or Critical Illness Insurance. They are both the same aren't they?

Medical Insurance

Medical Insurance plans typically cover the costs of having to seek medical advice, undergoing medical treatment & having to spend time in a hospital or clinic, but is that where the financial impact of suffering a critical illness ends?

Critical illness insurance

Critical illness cover pays a lump sum following diagnosis of one or more of a wide range of conditions. This is a fixed amount not linked to the cost of treatment or other associated medical expenses. This offers added flexibility of using as insurance against both medical costs as well as any associated financial impact of a critical illness, providing either a complimentary or a replacement solution to Medical Insurance.

Whether it's the main breadwinner or their spouse that suffers a critical illness, the impact on the family can be similar in terms of medical expenses, loss of earnings and disruption to everyday life.

Critical illness insurance cover offers peace of mind that money will be available to help with the costs associated with the treatment of, as well as life after surviving a critical illness.
